The Martin Berry House tells fascinating tales from three centuries of families who lived within its walls. We'll be showcasing rooms from every era, from its Colonial roots to the dawn of a new Millennium. The Martin Berry House is a 1 ½ story Dutch stone house. With early 18th century beginnings, the current house likely went through at least five phases of constructions. The first three construction phases were completed by the Berry Family over its 150 year tenure in the house. The fourth phase was completed by the May family at the very end of the 19th century. The Bogerts completed the last phase in the second half of the 20th century.
